

Questionnaire

CONTRACTOR PAYMENTS

This questionnaire is designed to assist business operators when seeking professional advice about their contractor payments. It is recommended that you answer as many of the questions as possible and give the completed questionnaire to your professional adviser.

Before completing the questionnaire it is recommended that you read Revenue Ruling PT6 'Guidelines on Subcontracting Arrangements - Employment Agents', which includes an addendum.

Please visit our website and download the document or contact the Office of State Revenue on (08) 9262 1300.

Whether you seek professional advice or not, if you want the Commissioner of State Revenue (the Commissioner) to examine your business's contractor arrangements and make a determination on whether any payments made to contractors are liable for payroll tax, you may send the completed questionnaire to the Office of State Revenue (OSR). Upon receipt, the OSR will investigate the contractor arrangements and this is likely to involve officers conducting further inquiries at your work premises. The Commissioner will make a determination as to whether the contractor payments are liable for payroll tax and will confirm this in writing to you. If it is determined that there is a liability for payroll tax, an assessment will be issued.

Where the following four combined elements are present, that is: (1) the worker is engaged directly or indirectly on an hourly or piecework rate; (2) the payment is wholly or principally for the labour of the worker; (3) the manner and sequence in which the work is performed is controlled by the business operator (or the business operator has the authority to do so); and (4) the worker performs the required services at the business operator's place of business (or a place specified by the business operator), the OSR would generally be of the view that an employer/employee relationship is in existence and that payments to the contractor should be included in the business operator's payroll tax returns.

However, as all aspects of the relationship between the business operator and the worker are relevant, if these four elements are present but you still consider that there may not be an employer/employee relationship it is recommended that you seek professional advice or obtain a determination from the OSR and for this purpose complete as much of this questionnaire as possible.

If you engage all your contractors through a labour hire firm or an employment agent it is not necessary to complete this Revenue Ruling PT6 'Guidelines on Subcontracting Arrangements - Employment Agents'.

A questionnaire should be completed for each category of contractor.

INTRODUCTION

- In this questionnaire Relevant Period means the current financial year and the previous five financial years.
- The individuals (other than those individuals engaged by your business as employees) who performed services for your business during the Relevant Period are referred to as Workers in this questionnaire.
- Some of the Workers may have performed services for your business as the result of an agreement or arrangement between your business and the Worker and in those cases the Worker himself/herself would usually be regarded by the parties as the contractor.
- Other Workers may have performed services for your business as the result of an agreement or arrangement between your business and another individual or entity (i.e. a company, partnership or trust) and in those cases the other individual/entity rather than the actual Worker would usually be regarded by the parties as the contractor.
- Your business may have engaged some Workers through an interposed entity (i.e. a company, partnership or trust) that has an agreement with your business and is also related to the Worker who performed the services for your business (for example, the Worker may have been a shareholder in the case of a company, a partner in the case of a partnership or a beneficiary in the case of a trust).

BACKGROUND

The issue of determining whether a relationship between a principal and a worker is that of being an employer/employee or principal/contractor is a complex area (consequently, the following tests have been compiled and are applied by the Courts). It is important to bear in mind that no one test will be a conclusive indicator of an employer/employee or principal/contractor relationship in isolation. In this regard, it is the reality and totality of the relationship that exists between the principal and the worker that will form the basis of any determination.

1. What industry or industries is your business engaged in?

2. Provide a brief description of your business.

.....

.....

3. (a) Approximately how many individuals engaged as employees worked for your business in the following financial years:

- (i) the current financial year?
- (ii) the previous year ended 30 June? 1 year ago
- (iii) the previous year ended 30 June? 2 years ago
- (iv) the previous year ended 30 June? 3 years ago
- (v) the previous year ended 30 June? 4 years ago
- (vi) the previous year ended 30 June? 5 years ago

(b) Briefly describe the types of duties carried out by the employees during those years.

.....

.....

4 (a) Describe the categories of Workers who performed services for your business during the Relevant Period (eg bricklayers, boilermakers, draftsmen, engineers).

.....

(b) Briefly describe the types of services performed during the Relevant Period by the Workers.

.....

.....

.....

5 During the Relevant Period were the payments made to:

- (a) the Workers? YES / NO
- (b) the Workers' interposed company, partnership or trust? YES / NO
- (c) other individuals or entities? YES / NO

CONTRACT AND PRACTICAL RELATIONSHIP

These questions are aimed identifying the features of the relationship between the principal and the worker. It is important to understand the Office of State Revenue considers the reality of the relationship between the principal and the worker and that clauses within the contract are not conclusive as an indicator of the nature of the relationship without further evidence supporting these claims.

- 6 (a) During the Relevant Period did any of the contractors enter into a written agreement with your business? Please attach a sample agreement, if applicable. If there were different types of agreements or the agreements changed in that period, provide a sample of each type of agreement. YES / NO
- (b) If no written agreement, did your business provide the contractors with a letter or other documentation setting out the terms of their engagement? Please provide a sample, if applicable. YES / NO
- 7 This question is limited to those cases (if any), where the Worker performed services pursuant to an agreement between your business and the Worker's interposed company, partnership or trust.
- (a) During the Relevant Period when engaging the company/partnership/trust was a particular Worker identified as the person who would perform the services for your business? YES / NO
- (b) Was it a requirement that the Worker who would perform the services for your business be approved by your business? YES / NO
- (c) If the identified Worker was not available, was it a requirement that the approval of your business had to be obtained for any replacement? YES / NO

CONTRACT TO ACHIEVE A 'GIVEN RESULT'

The following questions examine whether a worker was engaged to produce a 'given result' or for labour services. Where a worker is engaged to produce a 'given result' this would normally be indicative of a principal / contractor relationship, notwithstanding other tests. Where a worker is engaged for the provision of labour services, particularly where the labour services are for an ongoing or unspecified period of time, then this would be indicative of an employer / employee relationship. Where a worker is engaged to produce a 'given result' it is likely that at the satisfactory completion of the task there would be no further need for the retention of the worker's services. Another common feature of a principal / contractor relationship is that the contract price is agreed prior to the commencement of the task and is not a flat hourly or piece meal rate. In such instances completion of the task on, or before, schedule may result in a commercial benefit to the worker, such as the ability to undertake other contracts or tenders, providing that quality specifications are met.

- 8 (a) During the Relevant Period did your business engage contractors:
- (i) to produce a given result? YES / NO
 - (ii) for a specific period? YES / NO
 - (iii) for a specific project? YES / NO

 - (v) other? YES / NO

Please provide details.

If yes, please provide examples.

.....

.....

- (b) Was the contract price known at the start of the contract? YES / NO

If yes, please provide examples.

.....

.....

- 10 During the Relevant Period were the payments made wholly or principally for the labour or services of the Workers? YES / NO

- 11 During the Relevant Period were the contractors paid:
- (a) on completion of a given result or specific work? YES / NO

CONTROL

The test of control, among other tests, is applied by the Courts to establish the degree to which the activities of the worker are controlled or influenced by the principal. Genuine principal / contractor relationships tend to provide greater autonomy and flexibility to the worker than traditional employer / employee arrangements. If the contract or practicality of the relationship provides the principal with the ability to control the activities of the worker then it will be considered that this control has been exercised.

Indicators of control include where the worker is required to work set days or times, where they are required to report progress or attend meetings, where the priority, allocation or method of performance of the work is influenced or directed and where they are expected to work exclusively for the principal or must seek the principal’s approval before working elsewhere.

INDEPENDENT BUSINESS

This test is used to determine the extent or degree to which the worker operates a business that is independent to that of the principal.

Where a worker employs their own staff or undertakes a significant commercial risk (to the extent that they run the risk of making a loss and incur significant expenses in performing their tasks) it is a strong indicator that an independent business is being conducted. Other factors to consider include whether the workers provide their own leave, insurance and superannuation entitlements, the extent or percentage of the work / income the worker receives from the principal as a total of their income / activities, and who bears the financial responsibility for poor workmanship or mistakes. It is worth noting that employees are generally unable to make losses and that although some workers may have multiple sources of income and work it is still possible that they may be considered part-time or casual employees.

POWER TO DELEGATE

It is likely that where a particular worker is specified and is required to perform services for the principal that an employer / employee relationship exists. Generally speaking, in a principal / contractor relationship the primary requirement is the completion of the specified task. A contractor would normally reserve the unfettered right to delegate or subcontract the task subject to the subcontract party being qualified to complete the task. However, in certain instances a contractor may be personally required to perform a task as they possess particular skills or qualifications. If this was the case then key factors to be considered would be the extent to which personal labour services were provided, and the continuity of the relationship between the principal and the worker.

- 51 (a) During the Relevant Period could the Workers delegate work or tasks to:
- (i) an employee of your business? YES / NO
 - (ii) another Worker engaged by your business? YES / NO

 - (b) would the contractor arrange for an employee of your business or another Worker to complete the work? YES / NO
 - (c) would your business reallocate the work to an employee or another Worker? YES / NO

INTEGRATION

The following questions aim to ascertain the degree of integration the worker has with the principal’s business. The more integral any given worker is to the business then the more likely they are to be considered an employee. Aspects to be considered include whether the workers perform tasks that are similar in nature to those of employees, whether the worker was previously or subsequently hired as an employee of the principal and whether the services the worker provides are a core service or activity for the principal’s business i.e. would the business be able to operate without the service of the worker ? It is important to note that when considering the aspect of integration it is the service that the worker provides that is examined, as much as the worker’s activities.
